

What to Get the Big Kids

ASHLEY HAUGEN | 2013

If you have a big kid on your list, try one of these options that will make them forgo the eyeroll for a smile. The older kids get, the trickier they are to buy for. If they're at that in-between phase where toys are too babyish but money is too boring, try one of these engaging options.

Opening young minds while they're still pliable can be a really great thing, and with Disruptus, it can be really fun, too! This game, for one or more players ages 10 and older, starts with the roll of a die. One of four commands—create, improve, transform or disrupt—dictates the next move. Flip over a card and do as the dice tells you: create a new object from two shown on the cards (ex. Rope and a motorcycle), improve the object that is on the cards, transform it, or disrupt it, which means to take an object and come up with a new job for it. Simple yet creative is the name of the game.
